According to the Attorney General, Bailey was born in Dublin and joined the Royal Irish Rifles in 1904. He served with his regiment in India and was honorably discharged. On the outbreak of the European war Bailey was called out as a reservist and salled with the original expeditionary force to France. He was taken prisoner in September, 1914.

The Attorney General said that Bailey had related how a large number of Irish prisoners had been collected from various prisons in Germany and placed in a large camp at Limburg. Here they heard addresses by Casement, who tried to inflame their minds against the British Government, and persuade them to break their mants, and persuade them to break their oaths of allegiance and support.

The Attorney General here introduced a dramatic touch by having brought into the court a green rebel flag, which he said Casement had brought from Germany to Ireland. For a moment the prisoner sat with eyes fixed on the floor, refusing to lock at this emblem of the rebellion. Then he glanced up at the flag and smiled derisively.

It was early in the forenoon that the procession started from the Bronx home of the dead humorist in Kelly Street. The plain black hearse was followed by nearly two score carriages and automobiles and behind them a great line of marchers.

And these marchers and the thousands who stood at the street curbs, where they had waited for two hours, were the staunch friends that Shotem Aleichem had made at his small writing table in the Bronx home. The great majority of them he had never seen, nor had they seen him, but they knew his books—every one of them. Their presence there was the token of their gratefulness as well as of their mourning.

It was at the synagogue Ohab Zedak in One Hundred and Sixteenth Street synagogue, the crowd at the curbs watched the hearse go by, and then fell in at the hearse go by, and then fell in at the end of the long line. At Seward Park, which faces the Educational Alliance, gathered the mass of the people who had come down by subpeople in and about the park when the funeral procession made its first stop. It had been a long tramp for the marchers from Kelly Street, but they walked as if they would

DIFFICULT TASK TO HANDLE THE CROWDS.

It was then that the police were called upon to handle a difficult situation. As soon as the cortege moved away from the synagogue, the crowd, knowing its destination to be the Educational Alliance in East Broadway, and seeking to be there for the service, made a rush for the One Hundred and Sixteenth Street station of the Lenox Avenue subway. There were thousands in that rush and such were thousands in that rush and such was the struggling and pushing to get into the station that some one telephoned the police that a riot was in progress. This brought a detail of reserves to Capt. Gargan's aid and at last the crowd was got in order. It was a miracle that no one was injured.

From One Hundred and Sixture.

Count Okuma sent a telegram to-day expressing his sympathy and regret to Arthur Smith, the American aviator, who was attacked and sightly injured yesterday by a crowd at Osaka. The crowd was angered by a delay in the heginning of an exhibition flight smith was to have made and stoned the aviator, damaged his aeroplane and destroyed the aeroplane shed.

It was a miracle that no one was injured.

From One Hundred and Sixteenth Sireet the funeral procession went swiftly southward down Fifth Avenue, wherein a large crowd gathered at the curbs to watch it pass. It was impossible for any marchers to follow the hearse during this part of its journey, but a crowd of mourners was awaiting the hearse when the procession turned from Fifty-seventh Street into Second Avenue. Its progress was much slower too, and little by little a band of marchers formed, following the carriages and motor cars to the Jewish Community Building, "Kehillah," at Twenty-dirst Street. Here the chant for the repose of the soul was again sung, the service being in charge of Dr. J. L. Magnes, Chairman of the Jewish Community. With man of the Jewish Community.
